3. [redacted] the coast from Letniy Orlov to Omega. No construction was observed along this stretch, except for a single wooden watchtower.
4. There was little loading done at the sawmill in Omega. Most of the loading was done on the other side of the river. In the storage area, there were some old prefabricated sections for barracks and some piles of lumber for packing cases.
5. The railway was located inside of the fence which surrounds the sawmill area. At the outermost point, the railway swung down toward the sea, but the tracks did not extend all the way to the dock. The track along the fence seemed to be newly repaired. Trains were seen frequently; however, loaded cars were never observed.

6. A new factory was under construction near the sawmill. The building was very long but not very high. At the end farthest from the sawmill, there were some narrow chimneys of iron from which a little blue smoke emanated. There were indications that the factory would be joined to the sawmill.

However, there was nothing to indicate that production had started as yet. In the vicinity of the factory, there were some large packing cases which contained machines.
